

I oppose liberalizing ownership rules that will only lead to greater media concentration, a monolithic culture in America, irresistible power for media oligarchs, and the continuing dumbing down of the American people -- damage that cannot be undone. Just as we champion diversity in employment, recreation, and education, so we should do the same in our media. Is the FCC irrevocably captured by the broadcasting and media industries? Or can it exercise independent judgment in behalf of the American people? Monday tells the tale.
